BORROWED HUSBANDS MILDRED K. BARBOUR

Nancy was called to the phone early the next morning to receive a reassuring message from Dr. Langwell.

"Mrs. Stanley spent as comfortable a night as we could expect. There is a slight improvement this morning."

"Oh. her wise Langwell."

"Oh. you two were looking at each."

"Mrs. Stanley spent as comfortable a night as we could expect. There is a slight improvement this morning."

"Oh how glad I am! Can I see her today?"

"I think not, unless she asks for you. She is resting quietly. It is best not to disturb her. Will you innich with me today?"

"But I have so much to do." There is all Conne's charity bazaar work. And I have to see about having Curtis' belongings sent to the club. I wired him last night, and he ought good form for a man to tell one we-to arrive some time today if he was sober enough to read the message."

The doctor chuckled.

"Till wager you'll have your hands full once that young man is back in town. You won't find all borrowed liusbands as doele as I."

"Docile?" echoed Nancy. "If you and that he considers another good looking. Jealous cats. all of you are full one that young man is back in town. You won't find all borrowed liusbands as doele as I."

WHO SAID

TRY MAGNESIA FOR

These words would lead the reader to believe that their author. Louis XI, king of France, the first of the French monarchs to use the title "Most Christian King" (bestowed by the pope in the year 1469), was a most plous man. He was, in a sense, but was a most cold-blooded and unscrapulous person. This monarch's great object in life was the consolidation of France and the overthrow of the powerful nobles who wielded great influence on the government of the nation. To attain his ends Louis XI never considered the moral end of the matter. He wished to overthrow certain of the nobles who were none too friendly to him and

POOR SPORT.

POOR SPORT,

A find comes up and then it drops, its destiny pursuing; and friends who late were buying hops are tired of basement brewing, Last year the hops-and-raisins stores all day and night were busy, the Tired Clerks jumped around the floors until their heads were diszy. And patrons carried home the hops and straightway went to brewing, producing much unholy slops that threatened their undoing. The home brewed stuff was sometimes that threatened their undoing. The home brewed stuff was sometimes pink and sometimes green or yellow; what e'er its bue, one good long drink would paralyze a fellow. Home brewers wearied of their graff when it was fairly started, and from their basements quite a raft of browing junk was carted. And now there's no demand for hops, except for proper ages, no patrons buy them in the shops to make illicit juices. Thus one great sport has petered out, for it was vain and hollow, and soon or late, no man sport has petered out, for it was vain and hollow, and soon or late, no man can doubt, all kindred sports will fellow. Just now smart alocks think it that to knock the law to pieces, and buy punk gin from some galeot who packs it in vallace. But when they see their neighbors die from drinking poisoned whisky, they'll think it better to go dry and be alive and frisky. The ghost of Barleycorn will wend around its for a season, but all the lawlessness will end as people think and reason. (Copyright, 1922, George Matthew Adams.)
